As of January 2026, reporting has been refined to track unique inquiries (initial requests for assistance) rather than total communications. Follow-up contacts related to the same matter are consolidated under a single inquiry. This approach provides a clearer representation of distinct cases handled. Prior reporting periods included all communications (including follow-ups) and therefore are not directly comparable to current figures.

EXAMPLES OF EXISTING CASE LOAD

One case in ongoing mediation, involving a group of tenants at multiple properties across Alameda who alleges their landlord is manipulating the RUBS utility billing method at their properties, amounting to invalid rental increases and violating consumer protection laws.

One case in ongoing litigation, involving tenants who claims their Landlord is harassing them by entering their unit without notice, sending threatening texts or emails, leaving needles on the ground outside their home, "keying" their car, verbally harassing them and attempting to break into their home.

One case in ongoing litigation, involving various tenants who are currently displaced due to a fire in their unit. Their landlord allegedly refused to pay temporary relocation until the unit can be repaired.

One case involving a tenant who alleges their landlord is using their electricity and gas to power the properties community spaces without their consent.
