Core Mission

The City of Alameda's mission is to support the maintenance of a community where people can live, work, and play in a sustainable urban environment that is safe, vibrant, and aesthetically pleasing.

Core Values

Organizational core values reflect the operational principles by which management and employees provide the level of service the community expects and deserves.

Innovation Encourage new ideas that fulfill the policy direction of the Alameda City Council in a creative and progressive manner.

Integrity Demand high moral standards and ethical principles in all decisions.

Professionalism Promote leadership in management, and provide training and development of City employees to ensure our organization is current with the best municipal management practice.

Flexibility Maintain a versatile and dynamic organization which can respond to the imperatives of constant change.

Responsiveness Serve our elected officials, residents, and businesses openly, promptly, and respectfully.

Core Goal

To provide efficient and effective municipal services that support the organization's core mission.

Goals established by departments are driven by the department's mission. Goals are operational statements of broad direction or intent, based upon what a program expects to achieve sometime in the future. A goal provides a general description of an overall desired state. An objective is defined as a targeted outcome – something to be accomplished – in specific, well-defined and measurable terms. Goals are timeless; objectives are achievable within a specific time frame.

Performance measures gauge progress in achieving program objectives of efficiency and effectiveness in services provided. Performance measure refers to a specific quantitative or qualitative assessment of results obtained by a program.

Departmental goals, key program objectives and performance measurements have been incorporated into the budget and forecast for Fiscal Years 2013-2014 and 2014-2015.

The City of Alameda, incorporated April 19, 1854, is a 10.6 square mile island city located in San Francisco Bay. Alameda has a population of 74,640. In 1916, Alameda became a charter city and was one of six cities that were the first in California to adopt the Council-Manager form of government. Under this form, the City is governed by a five-member City Council. Programs and services are administered by a City Manager.

Location

The City of Alameda is seven miles east of San Francisco, situated within San Francisco Bay, and less than one mile west of the City of Oakland, directly west of Interstate 880. Alameda is a brief drive north of Oakland International Airport, which borders the City on the southeast.

Government Profile

The City Council is elected on a non-partisan basis. Councilmembers serve four-year staggered terms, with two Councilmembers elected every two years. The Mayor is elected to serve a four-year term. The Mayor and Councilmembers are elected at large, and subject to two elected term limits. The City Auditor and the City Treasurer are also elected by the voters. There is no term limit associated with these positions.

The City Council is responsible for passing ordinances; adopting the annual budget; approving the Mayor's nominees to Boards and Commissions; and hiring the three Charter offices of City Manager, City Attorney, and City Clerk. As chief executive officer, the City Manager provides the leadership and organizational direction for the operation and management of all City departments. The City Manager implements the policies and ordinances of the City Council, overseeing operations of the City, and appointing the City's department heads.

The City provides a broad range of services including police and fire protection; construction and maintenance of streets, parks, storm drains and other infrastructure; recreational and cultural activities, including a golf complex comprised of two 18-hole championship golf courses and one nine-hole executive course; and general government and administrative support services. Some major public services delivered within the City's boundaries, including water, wastewater, education, regional parks, and public transportation, are provided by other governmental agencies. The City of Alameda is not financially accountable for the operations of these franchises or government agencies.

Organization of City Government

The City of Alameda Charter establishes general government authorities in three defined Charter officers: City Attorney, City Clerk, and City Manager.

The City Attorney serves as independent legal counsel to the legislative body in all its authorities, activities, and decisions. The City Clerk serves as clerk to the City Council, responsible for maintaining an accurate public record of City Council proceedings such as minutes, ordinances, and resolutions of the legislative body. The City Manager is the chief executive officer of the City, responsible to the City Council for the management, administration, and oversight of the municipal organization.

The City organization is comprised of five major functional areas of service and program delivery: Administrative Services; Community Services; Development Services; Public Safety Services; and Public Services.

Administrative Services

Comprised of the municipal departments of Finance and Human Resources, this functional division of the City of Alameda provides support services to departments in personnel and financial management. Administrative Services includes payroll and accounts payable processing; employee and labor relations; budget and accounting support; and mandated audit and compliance work as required.

The Finance Department also manages and administers the City's business license program and serves as staff support to the City's elected Treasurer and Auditor. The Human Resources Department administers the citywide classification system, oversees the City's Employee Assistance Program, and supports the Civil Service Board, as required by the City Charter.

Community Services

Community Services are provided by two separate operating departments – Library and Recreation and Park. The City of Alameda maintains a state-of-the-art library. Built in 2006, the library contains more than 203,000 volumes as well as VHS and DVD-formatted movies and CD-formatted music collections. It also provides rooms for meetings, study, and discussion groups. A computer-equipped training center, large children's section, and café are located at the main branch. The library also supports two branch libraries.

The Recreation and Park Department maintains 18 parks, which include 16 multi-purpose athletic fields (four with night lighting), one soccer field, and 16 tennis courts. The Chuck Corica Golf Complex, managed by a private operator, has two 18-hole courses, a par-three nine-hole course, a driving range, a clubhouse, and a pro shop. The Recreation and Park Department also maintains two dog parks, a skatepark, two boat launching ramps, the Albert H. Dewitt "O" Club, and two swim centers located at Alameda and Encinal High Schools. Social and recreational programming is offered for youth, teens, adults, and seniors at several of the City's recreational facilities, including the Mastick Senior Center, which provides programming for active senior adults, 50 years of age and over.

Also found within Alameda are beaches, bird refuges, bicycle and pedestrian paths, natural open space, extensive picnic areas, waterfronts, and more than eight miles of the San Francisco Bay Trail. The shoreline parks along the San Francisco Bay and the San Leandro Marina extend for more than six miles, offering spectacular views of the San Francisco skyline and the East Bay hills. Alameda has more than 3,400 boat slips among its numerous private marinas.

Civic and private groups in Alameda host various community arts including live theater, a community band, a historical museum, cultural activities and a diverse community of musicians, writers, crafts persons and artists. Throughout the summer, free concerts are scheduled in various locations. Farmers markets, street festivals, and sand castle contests are ongoing events.

Development Services

Development Services is comprised of the Community Development Department, the Base Reuse Department, and the Housing Department. Planning, building, and economic development activities are managed by the Community Development Department, which is also responsible for supporting the City's Planning Board, Historical Advisory Board, Economic Development Commission, and Public Art Commission.

The City of Alameda has experienced development growth commensurate with state and national economic indicators. In addition to traditional development components, the Base

Reuse Department manages the former Naval Air Station Alameda, commonly referred to as Alameda Point, which includes the oversight of over two million square feet of existing leased commercial space and the planning for redevelopment of the property as a transit-oriented, mixed-use community. The functions of the Housing Department are administered by the Alameda Housing Authority.

Public Safety Services

The City provides full service public safety services through its Fire and Police Departments. The Fire Department provides fire suppression, paramedic, ambulance transport, fire prevention, and disaster services coordination. The Department operates four fire stations citywide – three on the main island and one on Bay Farm Island.

The Police Department manages comprehensive public safety services in patrol, traffic, investigation, and dispatch, as well as safety-related services such as crossing guards. The Department contracts with a non-profit agency, Friends of the Alameda Animal Shelter, to operate the City's animal shelter

Public Services

The City offers comprehensive public services in utility and city infrastructure. Alameda Municipal Power (AMP) – the “greenest little utility west of the Mississippi” – was established in 1887, and provides electric services to Alameda residents. Water and gas utilities are provided by other agencies. AMP is a component financial unit of the City, per the City Charter. Its budget is adopted by the Public Utilities Board, but included herein as a component unit.

Public Works is a full service department that provides construction and maintenance for the City's infrastructure. Building and fleet maintenance are support services provided to other departments by Public Works staff. The City has a comprehensive capital project and capital maintenance budget for streets, sewer, parks, and transportation systems. The capital improvement budget is funded from a variety of sources including development fees; special revenues such as gas tax and redevelopment funds; and enterprise funds.

ALAMEDA

A VISUAL HISTORY

1853

FOUNDED

The city we now know as Alameda, originally a peninsula off of modern-day Oakland and part of Spanish settler Luis Peralta's vast Rancho San Antonio, was founded as three separate settlements: Alameda, Hibbardsville, and Woodstock.

1860s

THE BEGINNINGS OF PARK STREET

Shortly after the arrival of the First Transcontinental Railroad, all transcontinental trains were diverted to the Oakland Mole. Alameda, however, did not suffer as it shifted its focus toward passenger trains by means of a new station located on the East End at the intersection of Lincoln Ave. & Park St. With this increase in through traffic, many East Bay residents began to relocate to Alameda and population practically doubled, transforming the city into a residential suburb. As both population and commerce exploded along Alameda's new routes of transportation, a bustling business district was created that still flourishes today: Park Street.

1893

ALASKA PACKERS' ASSOCIATION

A canned salmon manufacturer best known for its use of the famed "Star Fleet", the APA entered Alameda to catch and can salmon, anchoring its fleet in a yard near Paru St. The APA provided jobs for many local residents and, before long, gained significant political influence in local affairs.

AN ISLAND AT LAST

As it became clear at the turn of the 20th century that Alameda was quickly growing as an industrial center, the city found itself in need of a more efficient shipping system. And so, in 1902, a canal was dredged between Alameda and Oakland, officially making the city the island we know it as today.

1864

NEW FORMS OF TRANSPORTATION

Beginning in 1864, railroad & ferry systems were introduced to Alameda and on September 6th, 1869 the first train into the San Francisco Bay Area via the First Transcontinental Railroad arrived at the Alameda Terminal (located on the West End, currently Alameda Point).

1871

WEBSTER STREET BRIDGE

Now boasting four drawbridges and an underwater tube, Alameda's first bridge was constructed on the estuary connecting Webster St. and Oakland.

1872

BORDERS EXPANDED

The Alameda Charter was passed and the borders of Alameda were expanded to match the island's borders, officially incorporating all remaining areas of the island into the city of Alameda.

1896

CITY HALL COMPLETED

The building of Alameda's City Hall, located on the corner of Santa Clara Ave. & Oak St., was completed in 1896. In 1917, along with six other California cities, Alameda pioneered the Council-Manager form of government that it still uses to this day. This form of government has become so popular that it has been adopted by virtually all of California's cities.

1902

ALAMEDA FREE LIBRARY

Alameda's first library, designed by architects Willcox and Curtis, was opened on the corner of Santa Clara Ave. and Oak St. and is now considered an official Alameda City Monument.

NEPTUNE BEACH ERA

1917 marked the opening of Alameda's historic Neptune Beach. Located in the area we now know as Crab Cove and often equated to a West Coast version of New York's famous Coney Island, Neptune Beach was a bustling amusement park that drew consistently large crowds all throughout the 1920s and 1930s. Owned and run by the Strehlow family, the park was a fixture of Bay Area entertainment, not to mention the home of inventions such as the Popsicle and the Snow Cone. When the Bay Bridge between Oakland and San Francisco was built in 1939, crowds were drawn away from the park and, along with the hit of the Great Depression, Neptune Beach was forced to close. Fortunately, some historic sites related to the Neptune Beach era have been preserved, including the Croll Building (Webster St. & Central Ave.) and Neptune Court (Central Ave. & McKay Ave.)

LOCAL FESTIVITIES

In 1976, Chuck Corica (then mayor of Alameda) held the first annual Alameda Mayor's Fourth of July Parade, a tradition that continues to draw massive crowds to this day, now boasting the title of second largest and longest Independence Day parade in the nation. The Fourth of July parade was the first in a string of popular local events that have sprung up in Alameda over the past 40 years, including the Park Street Art & Wine Faire, the Webster Street Jam, Concerts at the Cove, the Park Street Spring Festival, and the Classic Car Show.

1908

THE ALAMEDA PARKS SYSTEM

What is now known as the Alameda Recreation and Park Department (ARPD) was formed on October 5th, 1908 as the Alameda Parks and Playgrounds Commission. Following just San Francisco and Los Angeles, Alameda was the third city in California to create such a system.

NAS ALAMEDA

In 1927, an airport site dubbed Airdrome and used by Pan American World Airways was built on Alameda's West End. By 1936, however, the city of Alameda ceded the Airdrome site to the U.S. Government, (by officially selling the land to President Franklin Delano Roosevelt for just $1.00,) and construction for a naval air station quickly followed. On November 1, 1940, NAS Alameda opened and naval operations began. Comprised of a large airfield, docks for aircraft carriers such as the USS Hornet, (which remains open as a museum today,) and extensive manufacturing facilities, Alameda's naval air station was fully operational and thus provided employment for thousands of local residents. NAS Alameda was one of the largest and most complete naval air stations in the world and played a key role in the Doolittle Raid on Japan following the attack on Pearl Harbor during WWII. With the decrease in demands for its use following WWII and the Cold War, however, Alameda's naval station's activity began to decline and it was officially closed on April 25, 1997. In 1999, the land formerly known as NAS Alameda was renamed Alameda Point and reopened under the ownership of the city, which is currently working on plans for its redevelopment.

HISTORIC ALAMEDA THEATER

The historic Alameda Theater, located on Central Ave. just off of Park St., originally opened on August 15th, 1932 as one of the Bay Area's grand movie palaces designed by Miller & Pflueger and run by the Nasser brothers. It served the city for over 40 years, officially becoming an Alameda Historical monument in 1976. In 1979 following its closure, the theater was rented out for different uses, including everything from a roller skating rink to a gymnastics school and even a cabaret. Eventually the community became restless, however, and AE Associates partnered with the City of Alameda to restore the theater to its original Art Deco grandeur as well as expand it into an eight-screen multiplex. The historic Alameda Theater was officially reopened as the Alameda Theatre & Cineplex on May 24, 2008. ii-9
